

OUR AUTHORS

Toomas Gross is lecturer at the Department of Social and Cultural Anthropology, University of Helsinki, and senior research fellow at the Department of Ethnology, University of Tartu. He has done fieldwork in the Zapotec villages of Southern Mexico and his research has been primarily concerned with religious change, conversion, customary law, and recently also healing.

toomas.gross@helsinki.fi

Nemanja Radulović is Assistant Professor of Folk Literature at the Department of Serbian Literature and South Slavic Literatures at the Faculty of Philology, University of Belgrade. His fields of interest include fairy tales, belief legends, comparative research of folk narratives, Sanskrit tales, and esotericism.

nem_radulovic@yahoo.com

Ilana Rosen, of the Hebrew Literature Department in Ben Gurion University of the Negev at Beer Sheva, Israel, studies the documentary literature of Jews of Central Europe as well as the multi-ethnic narrative of emigration to and foundation of the south of Israel. She is winner of the 2009 EKM American Folklore Society women studies prize.

ilanaro@bgu.ac.il

Svetlana Tsonkova is a PhD candidate at the Central European University, Budapest. Her main research interests include verbal charms, popular demonology and applications of magic in everyday life.

tsonkova_svetlana@ceu-budapest.edu

Ivan Kovacevic is anthropologist and ethnologist, professor of social anthropology at the Department of Ethnology and Anthropology, Faculty of Philosophy, University of Belgrade. His main fields of research are contemporary myths and legends, history of anthropological theory, and methodology of social anthropology.

ikovacevic@sbb.rs

Rozaliya Guigova is an art historian and ethnologist and has a PhD in folkloristics from the Institute of Ethnology and Folklore Studies with Ethnographic Museum (Bulgarian Academy of Sciences). She worked as lecturer of cultural anthropology at Sofia University and continued with postdoctoral studies at the University of Vienna and Humboldt University in Berlin. Her research interests primarily concern Bulgarian folk belief, traditional material culture of Bulgaria, life-cycle customs and visual culture.

rozaliagigova@yahoo.com

Bakhtiar Naghdipour, PhD, is an interdisciplinary researcher and a member of Education Faculty at the American University in Cyprus. His main fields of interest include sociolinguistics, literary criticism, and English composition and rhetoric. He has been teaching English language and literature in Iran and Cyprus for two decades.

bakhtiar.naghdipour@cc.emu.edu.tr

Tarmo Kulmar is professor of comparative religious studies at the Faculty of Theology, University of Tartu, Estonia. Education: history and archaeology (1975), psychology (1991), Dr. Theol. (1994, University of Tartu). Main areas of research include ancient history, religions of pre-Columbian America, phenomenology of religion, and history of Estonian oriental studies.

tarmo.kulmar@ut.ee

Erki Lind is a PhD student in religious studies at the University of Tartu. His main interest of research is the relationship between the human body and religion.

erkilind@ut.ee